Doing Business 2014 Fact Sheet: Middle East and North Africa

- Eight of 20 economies in the Middle East and North Africa implemented at least one regulatory reform making it easier to do business in the year from June 2, 2012, to June 1, 2013—14 reforms in total.

- Since 2005, 95 percent of the economies in the region have implemented business regulatory reforms in the areas measured by Doing Business. Together, the 20 economies recorded 182 reforms. The Arab Republic of Egypt implemented the most number of reforms in the region with 23 reforms during this period, followed by Saudi Arabia with 19 and Morocco with 18.

- Djibouti is among the global top 10 improvers this year—the economies making the biggest improvement in business regulation over the past year. Djibouti implemented regulatory reforms in the areas of starting a business, getting credit, and resolving insolvency.

- The United Arab Emirates has the region’s highest ranking on the ease of doing business, at 23 out of 189 economies.

- Due to security concerns in the Syrian Arab Republic, transporting goods from Damascus to the seaport has become much more expensive and time consuming: inland transport between the warehouse and the port takes about seven days now compared with two days previously, and it costs $1,100 compared with $450 before. Legally building new construction is impossible in the country since the government is no longer issuing construction permits.

- Data were collected for the first time this year for Libya. The country’s ranking on the ease of doing business is 187 out of 189.

Note: The distance to frontier measure shows how far on average an economy is at a point in time from the best performance achieved by any economy on each Doing Business indicator since 2003 or the first year in which data for the indicator were collected. The measure is normalized to range between 0 and 100, with 100 representing the best performance (the frontier). The regional averages exclude Libya and Malta, which were added to the Doing Business sample after 2009. The figure shows individual scores only for the 10 economies with the biggest improvements in the region; the arrows indicate those making the largest advances toward the frontier.

About the Doing Business report series
The joint World Bank and IFC flagship Doing Business report analyzes regulations that apply to an economy’s businesses during their life cycle, including start-up and operations, trading across borders, paying taxes, and resolving insolvency. The aggregate ease of doing business rankings are based on 10 indicators and cover 189 economies. Doing Business does not measure all aspects of the business environment that matter to firms and investors. For example, it does not measure the quality of fiscal management, other aspects of macroeconomic stability, the level of skills in the labor force, or the resilience of financial systems. Its findings have stimulated policy debates worldwide and enabled a growing body of research on how firm-level regulation relates to economic outcomes across economies. This year’s report marks the 11th edition of the global Doing Business report series and covers 189 economies.
